President Strong Resigns

BOSTON, September 6.—At a meeting of directors of the Atchison Topeka and Santa Fe railway to-day, the following communication was read:

GENTLEMEN: I hereby resign the office of president and director of the company, to take effect as soon as the board can select a successor, but not later than the next meeting of the board.

WILLIAM B. STRONG.

The resignation was accepted, and a resolution expressing appreciation of his faithfulness, integrity and ability, and their sincere wishes for his future welfare and success, adopted by the directors. Allen Manvel, late vice president of the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba railway, was then unanimously elected director and president of the company, and will assume the duties.

It is announced that a sufficient number of stockholders of the California companies consent to consolidation of the same, and the consolidation will go into effect forthwith. Instructions were given to the general counsel to take steps at the opening of congress to have San Diego declared a port for immediate transportation in bond, to put it upon the same basis with San Francisco so that San Diego will in the future be as favorable a position for customs and transportation facilities as San Francisco. They will also relieve the president from supervision of the financial affairs of the company, thus leaving him free to give his entire time to the operation of the railway properties in the system. F. E. Peabody, of Kidder, Peabody & Co., was elected director. Adjourned.

New Mexico's Convention.

SANTA FE, N. M., September 6.—The state constitutional convention got fairly down to business to-day and accomplished a great deal of work. The committee on elective franchise made a lengthy report. It provides that six months' residence in the state shall be required before a man can vote. No religious test is required. No one convicted of crookedness in connection with an election shall be qualified to hold office. The secrecy of the ballot shall be inviolate, save in the case of contested elections. That general elections shall be held every two years was referred to the committee on corporations.

The committee on congressional requirements and taxation made a report. It set forth among other things that the state shall acknowledge all the territory's debts except those incurred during the late war and known as militia claims. It provides for perfect toleration of religious sentiments; that there shall be no preference by law for any religious institution; that the state may tax lands held by any Indian who has severed his tribal relation; that the state shall establish a system of public schools open to all children of New Mexico alike and free from sectarian control. A minority report was submitted which approved the majority report except that clause relating to non sectarian schools. Reports received were sent to the calendar to come up some future time. The committee's reference to and exclusion of militia claims created a great deal of comment. There are about $400,000 worth of claims outstanding, and many members of the convention are large holders.

Heard from the Army.

WASHINGTON, September 6.—The subject of desertion from the army will be treated at length in the forthcoming report of the secretary of war. It is one that has had Secretary Proctor's earnest consideration from the beginning as well as that of the adjutant general and staff. Various changes in camp and barrack life, with a view to increasing the soldier's comfort and interest in his company, have been made, and canteen systems have worked well wherever tried, and the result has been that the percentage of desertions has been decreased since 1888.

Of the desertions 93 per cent occur among those serving their first and second years of enlistment. In May last Major Theodore Schram, assistant adjutant general, under instructions of Secretary Proctor, made a tour of inspection of the recruiting depots at David's Island, N. Y., Columbus, Ohio, and Jefferson barracks, Mo. The major is himself a soldier, who came up from the ranks, and his report to the adjutant general contains numerous suggestions, including the draft of a bill prepared by him last winter after a close study of the situation, calculated, in his opinion, to lessen the evil of desertion.

Major Schram says: "Whatever causes of discontent may at one time have existed, such as lack of provision for care for the physical comfort and needs of the enlisted soldier, or unreasonable demands upon and unfair or harsh treatment of him, have been removed so far as it is in the power of the military authorities to do so, and cases are rare where failure of the government to make good its obligations can be truthfully alleged as affording even a semblance of justification for desertion.

Nagle on the Stand.

SAN FRANCISCO, September 6.—Deputy Marshal Nagle was examined in the federal court this morning in the Terry case. He said that when Judge Terry approached Justice Field he had no idea he was going to make an attack, but before he could move [illegible] Terry slapped the justice on the face with his right hand and repeated the blow with his left hand, striking the justice the second time on the back of the head.

Nagle continued: "I was on my feet in an instant and throwing out my right hand to keep Terry off. I shouted 'Stop that. I am an United States officer.' Terry then turned his attention to me. He had his right arm in a position as if to [illegible]

[illegible] Senator Hill's Business

[illegible] September 6. [illegible] Senator Hill appeared at his room and wrote a letter to Colonel Cropley, chairman of the state democratic executive committee, declining the letter's request to meet him and joint parties in a debate before the people of Tioga county. Senator Hill referred to his alleged [illegible] Colt affair in the letter, and said he was informed that a message was made to the committee of the senate in 1881 [illegible] to the combination for the Colt land grant, which [illegible] depositing thousands of [illegible] in this town. It was to extend [illegible] Colt says that he proposed to contribute to state not to make a personal [illegible] of his own record. He wishes to direct public attention to the extent, propriety and impropriety of the evil practice of which he charges Cropley and his associates are engaged.

A Great Sensation.

SAN FRANCISCO, September 6.—A sensation was created in police courts this morning by Prosecuting Attorney James Long, who openly charged that Phillip Lavigne and Fire Commissioner Martin Kelly, two well known republican politicians, had offered to sell Judge Joachimsen's decision in the Kenny murder case for $1,000. The father and another relative of young Kenny, who killed and killed James Mace several weeks ago, were placed on the stand to corroborate Long's charges. They testified that ex-Senator J. N. E. Wilson, who was retained to defend young Kenny, had told them this morning that Crimmins and Kelly had called on him last evening and offered for $1,000 to obtain a decision favorable to the prisoner, and also promised if the grand jury should take the matter up afterwards that they would reach District Attorney Page. Judge Joachimsen instructed Prosecuting Attorney Long to lay the matter before the grand jury at once and push the investigation. Crimmins and Kelly both deny the charges.

A Suicide Incident.

BUFFALO, N. Y., September 6.—The young woman who committed suicide at Niagara Falls yesterday morning is believed to be Anna Mead, of this city. Miss Mead left home Wednesday morning. That was the last seen of her. The description of the suicide tallies with that of the missing girl. Yesterday afternoon her parents received a letter postmarked Niagara Falls. There was no date on it and no name was signed, but the handwriting was recognized as that of the missing girl. The letter read: "I bought a ticket for this place this morning, and if here, there is a possibility that my body will not be found, and I hope it never will. No one is to blame but myself." Miss Mead was twenty-five years old and well connected. No reason can be given for the act. She was generally considered a happy, light hearted girl, but had occasional spells of melancholy. Her home was pleasant and she was surrounded with every comfort. She moved in good society and was much admired. A week ago she visited Niagara and seemed to be strangely fascinated with the falls.

The Rush's Captures.

SAN FRANCISCO, September 6.—A dispatch from Victoria, B. C., states that the schooner Lilly, belonging to that place, arrived there from Behring sea last night. She reports she was boarded August 6th by the United States revenue cutter Rush, her papers searched and her sealskins confiscated. She was ordered to proceed to Sitka, but no prize crew was placed on board. The vessel sealed for a few days after this, but finally sailed for home. On the way down she spoke the Victoria schooner Kate. The latter reported that she had been ordered to heave to by the Rush, which she did, but the wind was blowing so hard the cutter could not lower a boat. The Kate was ordered out of Behring sea. She had 550 skins aboard. Officers of the Rush told the Lilly ten schooners had already been seized.

The A[illegible] Case.

WASHINGTON, September 6.—An official statement of the action of American nations upon the invitation to participate in the congress next month was issued by the state department to-day. It shows every one has accepted the invitation excepting San Domingo. The reason given by the government of that country for declining to participate was that the treaty negotiated by representatives of the latter country several years ago failed of ratification by the senate of the United States.

[illegible]

WASHINGTON, September 6.—Postmaster general has received a telegram from Spokane Falls, Washington territory, conveying the information that a majority of clerks in the postoffice have concluded to remain at their posts until [illegible] allowances for salaries, etc., as they threatened to do yesterday.

A Fire Calamity.

LEXINGTON, Ore., September 6.—Fire broke out back of J. T. Forbes' saloon early this morning, and in two hours the whole business part of town was in ashes. The loss will be about $150,000. There was no loss of life. Five blocks on each side of Main street burned.

ANTWERP'S CALAMITY.

An Explosion Occurs in a Large Cartridge Factory.

Adjoining Buildings Injured by Flying Fragments.

Thousands of Barrels of Oil Make the Fire Uncontrollable.

Three Hundred Killed and a Thousand Wounded.

A Dynamite Disaster.

ANTWERP, September 6.—A dynamite explosion has occurred in a cartridge factory in the vicinity of the [illegible], killing several persons and doing much damage to property. Portions of a house struck by burning fragments were set on fire, causing a panic in the building, which was crowded.

One hundred and twenty-six persons were killed.

ANTWERP, September 6.—The cartridge factory was situated behind [illegible] upon which millions of cartridges were loaded. It was adjacent to petroleum stores and two large Russian petroleum warehouses were set on fire and are now burning. Other stores are endangered. Police, gendarmes and firemen are working in the work of extinguishing the flames, while priests and sisters of charity are looking after the injured. The city is enveloped in dense smoke.

ANTWERP, September 6.—Eighty thousand barrels of oil are burning and eighty persons are injured, a majority of them workmen. Several soldiers received injuries.

ANTWERP, September 6, 7 p. m.—The explosion occurred in a workshop where old cartridges were being taken to pieces. Men and women were actively at work breaking them up, and 25 kegs had been partially broken. The fire soon had raging, and now covers two acres. The flames shoot up to an immense height. Amid the roar of flames there is a continuous succession of loud reports, supposed to be from the ignition and explosion of packets of cartridges. Beyond the Russian tanks and Nobles stores there are numerous houses. Immense Shipping at the Africa and America docks is in danger. The number of deaths will reach 200. About 300 persons were injured. The loss will be many million francs. It will be impossible to extinguish the flames in less than 24 hours. Several [illegible] have been burned owing to the intense heat. The firemen are unable to approach the fire nearer than 100 yards.

ANTWERP, September 6.—Midnight.—The latest estimate is that there are 300 killed and 1000 wounded. Explosions continue at the American docks. All only have been saved owing to the favorable direction of the wind. The stained windows of the cathedral are smashed, and it is feared the steeple will collapse. The whole vicinity is strewn with debris. Soldiers of the garrison and a large number of citizens are aiding the firemen. Many are dropping from exhaustion. The scenes at the hospital are heartrending. King Leopold has sent a telegram expressing sympathy and asking for particulars. The factory was [illegible] some time ago, but the deputation of permits allowed work to continue in it. Much indignation is expressed at the deputation.

Fifty Miners Dead.

PITTSBURGH, September 6.—The colliery explosion yesterday resulted in the death of fifty miners. Only 14 of 64 men at work were rescued. The scene of the disaster was Penicnick, a small town ten miles from this city.

The Great Strike.

LONDON, September 6.—The Scan. Navigation company has conceded the strikers' terms. An increased number of wharf labor[illegible] are at work. Shipwrights in the employ of Williamson & Workington, in Cumberland, have struck for an advance of four shillings weekly.

Hamilton Testifies.

NEW YORK, September 6.—Mrs. Swinton and her son Joshua Mann were taken to the Tombs police court this afternoon. Robert Ray Hamilton affirmed to the complaints against the defendants. The defendants pleaded not guilty and demanded an examination. Hamilton took the witness stand. He looked pale and haggard and gave his testimony in an almost inaudible voice. The charge he made was a surprise. It was larceny in the second degree. He admitted knowing Mrs. Hamilton since June '85. He stated that they had lived together as man and wife a great part of that time.

Hamilton said he had lived with Eva Mann three or four years previous to their marriage. He never suspected that the child which now bears his name was not his own, but he did suspect that Mrs. Swinton and Josh Mann were conspiring at the time in July to obtain some of his money. The testimony of Hamilton in detail showed the source of money he has given Mrs. Swinton. Inspector Byrnes told the story already printed about the baby.

[illegible] Delegates to Congress.

DENVER, September 6.—Eastern delegates to the national conference of charities which meets in San Francisco on the 11th instant, arrived here this afternoon on a special train. They were met at the depot by a local committee and given a drive through the city and an elegant dinner at the Windsor. To-night they left for Manitou Springs, where they spend Sunday. The Denver delegates, J. S. Appell, Rev. Myron Reed, Thos. Van Ness, Thos. Uzzell and Mrs. Jacobs, will join the party in Nebraska on Monday when the journey west will be resumed.

Telephone Litigation.

WASHINGTON, September 6.—The suit of the United States government against the Bell Telephone company has assumed a more definite shape. A paper filed in the patent office assigns to Senator Frank Jones, John R. Bartlett and Henry C. Ambrose, as absolute trustees, absolute control of all rights held by the People's Telephone company. This means the unification of all interests which formerly fought Bell separately. The Bell patent is to be fought on the ground of priority in the labor of Daniel Drawbaugh.

Stock Market.

NEW YORK, September 6.—Money on call easy, 3 to 4; prime paper 5 to 7. There was less business in the stock market to-day, though there was no less interest in dealings, and even after the material advances of yesterday most stocks are fractionally higher to-night. The news of the day was of little importance, but such as there was rather favored an advance.

Shot by Tramps.

PITTSBURG, September 6.—There was a fight this afternoon between three tramps and the crew of a local freight train on the Pennsylvania railroad at Wells station, 18 miles from this city. The tramps refused to get off the train and the latter attempted to force them. Foster Cox, a brakeman, was shot and fatally injured. Jesse Nicholas, another brakeman, who attempted to rescue Cox, was beaten over the head with the butt end of a revolver and very seriously injured. The tramps escaped before assistance arrived.

Annexed by Great Britain.

SAN FRANCISCO, September 6.—Advices from Honolulu by steamer Australia to-day state that the British man-of-war Espiegle returned there August 28, after an absence of a month. She had visited Humphrey's Island and Nassau Island and formally annexed them to the British dominion. The islands are twenty miles apart and are supposed to be on the route of one of the projected trans Pacific cables.

While at Humphrey's Island the Espiegle took on board twenty men of the British ship Garthsna, from Sydney to San Francisco, which was wrecked near Starbuck Island July 17. The ship went aground during the night and was abandoned. The officers and crew in three boats kept near the ship for a day or two, but finding she could not be saved they attempted to go ashore, but could find no place where it was safe to land. A boat containing Captain Pye and eight of the crew [illegible] not been seen since.

The St. L. Democrat suggests that Commissioner of Pensions Tanner adopt a policy of "modest stillness" instead of "excessive talking."

The recent election of a Catholic chaplain over the state constitutional convention of New Mexico is supposed to indicate a strong Catholic sympathy in the territory. This has more than ordinary significance, growing out of a letter addressed by Archbishop Salpointes to the convention. In this letter, the public school systems of Canada and Europe are highly commended, while the public school system of this country receives no word of commendation. The letter of the archbishop has called forth a letter from ex Governor Axtell, who puts in strong, clear language the position held in this country on this subject.

The facts regarding the city finances of Denver are a complete vindication of the present administration of the city affairs. It is quite true that many of the appropriations are already exhausted, though only about eight months of the financial year have gone. But the extravagance seems to have been largely during the administration for the first four months of this year when the Hon. W. S. Lee was mayor. There is but one department where the expenditures should have been greater in the first four months of the year than in the second, and this was in the electric light and gas department. During the first four months of the year $91,[illegible] 41 was paid out under Mayor Lee and during the second four months $14,[illegible] 57 was paid out under Mayor [illegible]. In the latter [illegible] the expenditures were necessarily greatest during the four months from May 1st to Sept. 1st. During the latter months, for example, little is done in the health department and a great deal in security, during the summer. Yet Mayor [illegible]'s expenses were less by [illegible] dollars less than Mayor Lee's for the same time. The police for the month of May was double that of the same month under Mayor Lee. The expenses of the police and jail departments have only increased about fifty per cent. under Mayor [illegible] over what they were under Mayor Lee. The only department in which the expenses under Mayor Lee are largely in excess of the expenses under Mayor Lee is the sprinkling department. But it appears that during the four summer months Mayor Lee had purchased five carts, which also necessitated considerable extra expense in operating them, and this is the season in which the sprinkling is done. The people of Denver have no reason for complaining of the extravagance of Mayor Lee.

Our [illegible] contemporary, the News, as a reform paper is sadly out of joint. Apparently, it has always been for reform when there was no prospect of anything being done. But now, that an attempt is being made to ferret out any dishonesty and punish the offenders, it gives its whole time to finding fault with the method used. When the News remembers that its cause of fraud and dishonesty made no impression on the public mind while the charges made by other papers had sufficient influence to compel an investigation. It should be [illegible]. If the [illegible] the News did not [illegible] an impression was because the public generally did not believe the charges, certainly the News is simply confirming this belief by its conduct now that an investigation is going on. The News, however, says it does not favor this investigation, for fear it may may not result in bringing proceedings against the former and present state treasurers for interest received on public funds. But this is not a good reason. As a reform paper, it should by the rights of the people, it should advocate, endorse and help every effort made to purify the public service in any direction, and to recover for the state any moneys improperly taken from the treasury. It is not possible to reform everything at once, and a true reform organ should welcome the least step in that direction. The most extraordinary thing about the policy of the News is its conduct toward Brady and Connor. If stated last fall, these men were blackmailers, and in alliance with the criminal class of Arapahoe county. During this year it has called attention to the fact that it was the first to make these charges against them. A tremendous pressure was brought to bear upon Mayor Lee and others to secure their release. It was to have been expected that the News would have been pleased and would have praised the courage and independence of Mayor Lee [illegible] in declining to appoint these men. But we doubt that time the News has not [illegible] with the police force and practically make it appear that Mayor [illegible] has not done a wise thing.

Murray's W[illegible]

It is to a certain extent a drain on a vicious [illegible] and we now know that the [illegible] nervous vitality the medical profession are beginning to recommend going to bed: it is certainly a great mistake, as Kingsley found out, to attempt to repair mental wear and tear by overtiding the body. A young and vigorous schoolmaster ought not to be conscious of any great fatigue at the end of an ordinary school term, and may loiter a little in the open air if his tastes dictate him so; but a schoolmaster does need all his holidays for other purposes. To teach well, a man ought to be full; a good many hours' reading go to make an effective one-hour lecture on a historical or literary subject, because a lecture is not effective if it consists in poking and prying into a number of books with paper markers. No one ever riveted the attention of a class by a system of peeping and mutterling. The mouth to be effective must speak out of the fullness of the brain, the eyes and ears must be absolutely at liberty to detect the slight inattention, the smallest confusion of thought, and a man to teach at full power must have his subjects at his fingers' ends. No doubt some men are wonderfully ready—aye, lucid—with their tongue when backed by a very moderate basis of reading, a shallow, clever man who can "get up" a subject at an hour's notice and has a knack of exposition is very often a scandalously effective teacher but this is not a common gift. If, then a man is to do himself and his pupils justice if he is to put it crudely, "to earn his money" a considerable period of the holidays ought to be spent in making himself perfectly familiar with the subject he is going to teach; but when he has done this he is still only an unprofitable servant. If he takes any but the most commercial view of his position he must do a great deal more. He must be storing his mind all round with allusions, telling facts, apposite illustrations and this, like gold, washing can can only be done by turning over a vast amount of very unpromising looking rubbish. Schoolmasters too seldom live so much with their boys and are so intimate and easy with them that it is their duty if they have any intellectual views at all, to make themselves into a kind of sponge of knowledge, ready to supply a few drops upon the slightest impulse. At the same time this must be done easily and naturally, without affectation or pedantry, or it must not even dimly suggest Mr Barlow. It is quite an exception for a boy to pick up much in the way of intellectual cultivation at home; but as he spends far more time in the company of his tutor, his tutor ought deliberately to endeavor to supply such defici[illegible] himself.

Very [illegible]

The Chantrey Bequest.

The Plantagenets intermarried with the nobility. Henry VII. derived his patronymic from a Welsh gentleman. Four of Henry VII.'s ill-fated wives were English women, and his younger sister, after tasting the sweets of royalty in France, [illegible] a subject for her second husband. Queen Mary, of the [illegible] fous epithet, might have reigned more happily and lived longer if she had married as the nation wished and preferred an Englishman to Philip of Spain. Queen Elizabeth certainly would have done so if she had not judged it wiser not to marry at all. James II. married an Englishwoman, whose children mounted the throne. The marriage did not take place under the nicest auspices and it might have been blighted if Charles II. had not insisted upon it, a point to be scored in favor of the merry monarch, and offering a striking contrast to the conduct, in not very dissimilar circumstances, of that pious and scrupulously moral sovereign George III. Since the accession of the house of Hanover, with a recent exception, to which before these words appear in print, we may be able to add another, there have been no such ladies intermarry with subjects of blood. The royal family of Great Britain have been ruled by a foreign race, in spite of the Act of the throne, and acts of naturalization not giving them a right to be called English. They have drawn for their matrimonial alliances upon the smaller German houses Anspach, Saxe Gotha, Mecklenburg, Brunswick, the Coburgs, Schleswig, H[illegible] right handed and left handed. Till lately not a single breach has been made in the ring fence for a hundred and seventy years. Perhaps no other nation would have sustained this lengthened price with as [illegible] of [illegible]. It is high time that this exclusive system came to an end, and there is a certain auspiciousness in every indication that it has seen its best days.

[illegible]'s Method.

Chopin and Other Musical Essays—Sand's T[illegible]

George Sand has given us a vivid sketch of Chopin's consciousness as a composer. "He shut himself up in his room for entire days," she says, "weeping, walking about, breaking his pen, repeating and changing a bar a hundred times, and beginning again next day with minute and desperate perseverance. He spent six weeks over a single page, only to go back and write that which he had traced at the first essay." (Oh, modern composers, read and learn!) As regards his creativeness, George Sand says that "it descended upon his piano suddenly, completely, sublimely, or it sang itself in his head during his walks and he made haste to hear it by rushing to the instrument." I have already mentioned the fact that when he wrote his last mazurka he was too weak to try it on the piano. In one of his letters he speaks of a polonaise being ready in his head. These facts indicate that he composed mentally, although, no doubt, during the improvisations many themes occurred to him which he remembered and utilized. Sometimes the pictures in his mind became so vivid as to form real hallucinations. Thus, it is related that one evening when he was alone in the dark trying over the A major Polonaise, which he had just completed, he saw the door open, and in came a [illegible] knights and ladies in mediæval costume the same, no doubt, that his imagination had pictured while he was composing. He was so alarmed at this vision that he fled through the opposite door and did not venture to return. Another illustration of the relation between genius and insanity.

The Future of Photography.

Prof. John Trowbridge in Scribner's.

The ease with which photographs can now be taken by any one is destined to have an important influence upon science, art, and literature. It must not be supposed, however, that with the cheapness of material, and simplicity in applying it, perfection in the art of photography is any nearer to its votary than it was when the difficult wet plate was in vogue. Pictures can be taken more readily than formerly, but the conditions of light and composition remain as difficult as ever—and the amateur every year throws behind him his quickly taken photographs and discovers that art is still long.

The improvements in photography have resulted from the labors of the chemist rather than from those of the optician and the maker of lenses. Indeed one of the most remarkable features of photography is the simplicity of the apparatus which is necessary. This simplicity perhaps might have been foreseen by a careful study of the human eye. The eye of every person may be said to constitute a detective camera. The retina is the dry plate upon which all objects are focused. [illegible] of the crystalline lens the cavity behind this lens constitutes the camera, the iris and the pupil the diaphragm, and the eyelid the drop shutter. The latter is true, is a slow drop shutter [illegible] when as the drop shutter that is employed to take an express train may [illegible] as fast as the one hundredth of a second. [illegible] gives the brain a number of confusing impressions of an object in motion, while the sensitive plate and the drop shutter of the camera can give but one phase of the motions. It does not seem just therefore, that the photographer should copy certain instantaneous attitudes of animals in motion, for the eye does not see them.

ENGLISH WOMEN.

Belva Lockwood's Glimpses of the English Nobility.

Queen Victoria, the Princess of Wales and Princess Louise.

Lady Sandhurst, Baroness Burdett Coutts and Others.

The "Queen's Set" and the "Prince of Wales" set.

(Copyrighted 1889, by Mrs. Belva Lockwood.)

LONDON, August 27, 1889.

English women are quite English, of course, but there are so many different cls of them, so widely different from each other, that you cannot speak of English women as a whole. The type of English women whom you see elegantly dressed, and driving, between five o'clock and seven p m during the season, leisurely in her carriage with her footmen and outriders, or, fresh and rosy, galloping on horseback in Rotten Row from ten o'clock to eleven a m and representing in themselves the best blood of the English aristocracy has apparently little kinship with the physically and mentally undeveloped, half-fed, sad eyed women with a babe at her breast, whom you meet in the vicinity of Whitehall or the Seven Dials or perhaps in Lambeth or Southwark.

The one represents the effects and the advantages of having been well born, well bred, well educated, and surrounded by all of the influences that culture and companionship can give, and, following the thought of Professor Tyndall, the highest development of man from the monkey; while the other represents the effects of bad birth, bad breeding, no culture, half-fed, with no enjoyments, and surrounded through childhood and womanhood with everything vicious and inheriting blood tainted with the evil atmosphere for generations, until the image of Eve in womanhood has descended week below the brute whom Tyndall names as our possible ancestor. Strangely enough, both of these types are the development of the same civilization and largely both are the results not of any special merit in themselves, but of the circumstances of their surroundings.

A word about the highest example of the first category. I saw Queen Victoria the other day when she alighted from the coach at Victoria Station with the Prince and Princess of Battenberg and Lady Erroll, one of her maids of honor. Thousands of people had gathered impromptu, as it were, to catch a glimpse of the queen upon her arrival from Osborne on her way to Buckingham palace.

"Perhaps she will not come this way, or her carriage will meet her some blocks below," exclaimed an anxious bystander.

"The queen never disappoints her people," answered one of the guards, "and when she is expected is always punctual to the minute."

"She may get into a close carriage so that we cannot see her," continued the fair interlocutor.

"The queen always rides in an open carriage. dislikes very much to be shut up. I have seen her riding in an open coach in a snowstorm. Bless her! she likes to see the people."

And so it proved. Her train arrived at the station punctually on the minute as advertised—herself and suite were quickly entranced in the open carriages in waiting and preceded by an escort and two of the royal guards the carriages rolled quickly out from the road leading to the station, where all traffic for the time had been temporarily suspended, and soon disappeared down the boulevard leading to Buckingham palace.

The queen walks with a stick, but she did not seem fatigued the other day, as she stepped briskly to her carriage, drawn by four bays, although she had listened to the salutes, and silently bowed the salutations of sixty ships in the line at Spithead, from the deck of her yacht Alberta, and had been the recipient of many other royal favors. She was very plainly clad in a black bonnet, and a gray or mouse colored sister, and bowed a little stiffly to the cheering crowd at right and left as her carriage passed.

"Perhaps the recent discussions in the house of commons on the royal grants had not pleased her. I suppose she does not read the speeches?" I remarked to my well informed English companion.

"Oh! yes, she reads every word of them, and is thoroughly posted about everything in parliament," was the response.

But the queen has not wasted her fortune on her own wardrobe, although she always insists that every person who appears in her presence shall be dressed en règle. Even the newspaper men who reported the recent royal wedding were carefully inspected before admission by her majesty's master of ceremonies, to see if anything was lacking in their attire.

Nor can Queen Victoria lay any pretentions to beauty either in the majesty of her appearance, in form or figure, or in benignity or beauty of countenance or expression. Walking unattended, without the trappings of royalty, she would hardly excite comment.

"Oh! she isn't much to see," exclaimed a kindly old gentleman in the last drawing room as he lifted his spectacles for a moment from his newspaper. "She is only a homely old woman now. I knew her when she was a young and handsome girl."

But whatever may be done about the royal grants, the rank and file of English people like Victoria. She has been a careful, painstaking mother, jealous of the respectability and good name of the royal family, and careful, not only about the provision made for her children, but for her grandchildren. During the fifty two years of her reign England has greatly prospered, and she has never by any indiscretion imperilled that prosperity. She might have been bolder and more liberal—more progressive, and have spoken a word for the more extended rights of English women, but she might have done far worse. Prince and [illegible]

Another example of the high class English woman I refer to Princess Louise of Fife, the new royal bride.

When a rich bachelor in his forties takes a bride in her twenties it is usually a mariage de convenance rather than an affair of the heart, and is often arranged and the preliminaries arranged by the parents of the bride. So thought the outside world in this case. But the world of gossip is often mistaken. Lord Fife has been for years a friend of the Prince of Wales. His Scottish manor borders on that of the queen. He was one of the ushers at the baptism of the little Princess Louise and has known and watched her since her childhood. The princess, who has hardly left her mother's side from her cradle, and still opportunities for seeing her former lover often, and, attracted by those little delicate attentions that so often win a woman's heart, had conceived a passion for Lord Fife before any avowal had been made on his part, and like her royal grandmother, has made her own choice.

For four successive years preceding the marriage, whenever his lordship's birthday came around Princess Louise had wrought with her own hands a birthday gift for him, but through all of these years had never summoned courage sufficient to present one of them until his lordship had made her a proposal of marriage, when she presented them all at once. So the love affair really commenced with her at nineteen, and it is doubtful if the circles of the moon presented by Lord Fife to her really gave her more pleasure than her simple presents gave to him.

In appearance the Princess Louise is tall and slender, beautiful in form and feature and gracious in manner, resembling more, perhaps, her mother than her father. Like the Princess of Wales, also, she dresses very quietly and simply and is not fond of display or of any excess of ornamentation. A very elaborate description was given by the newspapers of the wedding trousseau, but there was really nothing dazzling or gorgeous in the whole outfit.

Still no additional charm of jeweler or manteau maker could have added anything to the exquisite beauty of the fair bride, as, dressed in pure white silk with a delicate wreath of white flowers holding back her bridal veil, she rode with the Prince of Wales in the state carriage of the queen from Somerset house to Buckingham palace, bowing and smiling to meet the assembled crowd as she went forth to meet the bridegroom. No one could doubt the supreme joy at that moment, and the cheers of the assembled multitude betokened it. Long live Lady Fife! The fact that the queen has issued to her husband letters patent as Duke of McDuff will add no distinction to her.

The Princess Alexandra of Wales, who is likely to be at some future day the first lady in England, and now forty-five years of age, has been well fitted by twenty six years of social life for that responsible position. She not only loves and appreciates the English people, but is well beloved by the [illegible] in mind and person, [illegible] and self sacrificing, she has always been a welcome guest and in recent years has done much as the consort of the Prince of Wales in performing the duties that pertain to the royal household in receiving its guests.

The mother of a large family, the princess seems to have lost none of her youth and beauty, or of her graceful carriage and deportment. Like her distinguished mother in law, she has been careful and patient, sharing their joys and sorrows, and through all of the vicissitudes of fortune, of evil and good report, a faithful and dutiful wife. To her the English people owe much.

In all civilized countries where knowledge is disseminated and progress [illegible] there is a forgotten contrast as to the old order of things and a desire for more freedom, and an equality of rights and privileges. I visited the house of commons a little while ago to get a glimpse if possible of Gladstone, and on coming out met a detachment of ladies with the draft of a bill for women's rights. I had been advised that this delegation was coming. Dr. Clark, M. P., suggested that I should wait to meet the ladies which I was glad to do as I was anxious to know what English women were doing and thinking upon the great questions that have so much disturbed my American sisters, and which French women have recently been agitating so much.

We had not waited long when Mrs Beaconsfield, Dr. Kate Mitchell, Mrs Batchelor, and a number of other women appeared: together with the [illegible] faced, soft-voiced, persuasive chairwoman of the committee, Mrs. W. Elmy.

The bill which the ladies desired to have introduced was for the purpose not only of extending equal property rights to married women as well as to spinsters and femme seule, but equal political rights with men. Mr. R. B. Haldane, M. P., a pleasant, genial bachelor, was summoned to meet the ladies, and after listening to their pleadings speeches giving the reasons why, and especially to the persuasive eloquence of the chairwoman, he agreed to take charge of the bill.

The ladies had [illegible] half protesting for the ladies, as if afraid that they were out of their sphere and not with the support and confidence of the American women who demand rights because they are rights, and were quite gratified when assured by the M. P. that he would do all that he could in their interest.

Upon inquiry I learned that there are a goodly number of women suffrage and other progressive women's societies in England, many of them tending to the same point but different in methods. The central committee for women suffrage, of which Mrs Millicent Garrett Fawcett is secretary, are willing to accept nothing except the absolute equality of women in property and political rights, while agreeing with them on this point is the Manchester society, under the secretaryship of Miss Lydia Becker, who also edits The Woman's Journal, and the Bristol society, under the secretaryship of Miss Helen Blackburn. The Central National society, under the secretaryship of Miss Florence Baignalet, are willing to hold the present English position as it is, with the municipal vote already granted to spinsters and femmes seules and press on for the electoral vote for this class leaving the married women out until a more favorable time. So, unwisely, they divide their forces.

Quite an effort is being made to get women into official positions on school boards and other positions of minor importance which they have held for some time, and especially as members of the London county council.

At a recent election two women, Miss Jane Cobden and Lady Margaret Sandhurst, were duly elected by their constituency to the council and took their seats, but the opponent of Lady Sandhurst, a conservative, contested her election and brought the same before the court. After due deliberation the court declared that as the law which made provision for the London county council had made no provision for women members that the lady was ineligible and gave judgment against the lady for costs of fifty pounds, while Miss Cobden still retains whose position was not contested, her seat. The court did not seem to take into consideration that the comprehensive term "man" embraces woman throughout the English language, and has always been so construed in ecclesiastical and civil law, and in all the civil law when ever it has involved a woman's property or estate.

A position on the London county council is one that carries with it much weight, involving, as it does, the rights and privileges of 5,000,000 of people. A member of the house of commons said to me yesterday that he had just resigned his position in that body in order to accept one on the London county council.

The aristocratic Englishwoman, with brains, is tired of folding her hands and having nothing to do but the idle humdrum of social life. As a rule she does not believe in woman's rights, although she does and is willing to do anything that the strong minded advocate, except to vote. The Primrose league is an aristocratic political club composed of men and women who favor the conservative party and are anxious to preserve the ancient order of things. They hold their weekly or monthly meetings as the exigencies of the political situation or their pleasure may demand, listen to and make political speeches, and when ever a member of the club, or one of their male favorites are up for office, the ladies of the club usually prove to be the most efficient electioneerers. They make speeches to the manufacturers and tradesmen, to the laboring man, if need be, and on election day use their carriages to bring voters to the polls who favor their candidates. They have their elegantly furnished club rooms supplied with reading matter of their political and social type.

Among the charities English women of rank have had and are doing much, notwithstanding all of the squalor, vice and poverty of London. Mrs Josephine Butler's work against the licensing of houses of prostitution, and her efforts for the salvation and reclamation of young girls, is known on both sides of the Atlantic.

Miss P. H. Peckover of Wisbech, who has made a specialty of organizing societies of women and juveniles, and in the distribution of peace literature, has accomplished much good in quelling belligerent passions and abating quarrels.

Miss Mary H. Hart has organized very successfully a Women's Co operative Decorators' Association, while Mary Clementina Black has organized Women's trade unions and Provident leagues among a great variety of classes of women artisans, looking both to their protection of rates and to their support when ill, while Mrs S A Barnett of St. Jude's vestry has taken up her abode in the very heart of the White chapel district.

The ladies of the English aristocracy of the higher class are tall, slender, and well formed, especially in youth. They dress well and in good taste, with less of ornamentation than either the French or American women. They are polite, cultured and obliging, but with more stiffness and less of grace than the French. As a rule their reading is quite extensive, but they always carry about with them the impression of their exalted position, and never deign to address any person without the formality of an introduction, not even then unless they consider the person of suitable rank for an acquaintance. Rank with them does not always rest with culture or morals, but with the accidents of birth who inherit titles from their immediate or remote ancestors.

London has two aristocratic sets, the one known as the "queen's set," that is composed, or supposed to be of the cream de la creme of society, including royalty and the blurst of blue blood, and excluding women without rank, divorced women, or any woman against whose character there is or has been a taint or suspicion of impropriety, or even of foolishness. The queen some time ago refused to receive ex Queen Isabella of Spain at court, although the Emperor Eugenie has always been received, in consequence of which Queen Isabella did not go to England. The queen refused to receive an actress of some note at one of her drawing rooms because she had, to use her own language, "romped with the Prince of Wales", the Duchess of Marlborough, one of our own American women, was for some time refused admittance to the queen's drawing rooms because her husband had previously been divorced, and when she was finally admitted her husband did not appear with her. The Baroness Burdett Coutts has never been invited to court or to royal gatherings since her foolishness, as the queen terms it, of marrying Ashmead Bartlett. She was notably absent from the late royal wedding. Another lady of high degree has recently lost favor with the court by marrying a man many years her junior.

But this does not seem to work well the other way, as several female actions of royalty have recently married men much older than themselves. Was the queen angry at the marriage of Lord Fife with the Princess Louise? I asked on the day of wedding. "Oh! no, indeed, she helped to make the match.

Two special trains carrying Manitou bound evening passing delegates en route to the convention of Nat ional Charities at San Francisco to the number of forty. Their baggage was sent up to the Broadmoor and The Manitoua where they will be entertained during their brief sojourn. They took carriages provided by the El Paso Livery company and took a drive through the Garden of the Gods before dinner. The party are in charge of Captain Shepherd, the western agent for the Chicago and Alton and will leave this morning for Salt Lake City.

President John Hulbert, of the Pike's Peak railroad left by train last night for Chicago in the interests of the road. In conversation with a GAZETTE reporter Major Hulbert said that the contract for the construction of the road bed would be awarded to Messrs Lantry & Sons, of Joliet, Ill., one of the largest firms of contractors in the west, but at what figure he could not definitely state until his return from Chicago next Thursday. The contractors signify their intention of preparing for the immense task at once, the ground will probably be broken in less than two weeks. At a recent meeting of the company the following officers were elected: President, John Hulbert, vice president, R. R. Cable; treasurer, J. B. Glover; directors, John Hulbert, Jerome B. Wheeler, J. B. Glover, David H. Moffat and R. R. Cable. There have been considerable delays heretofore, but it is the company's intention to press the work of construction as rapidly as possible.

Whip and Noose.

ATLANTA, Ga., September 6.—Wednesday night a negro boy was lynched for rape at East Point, near here. No officer held a mass meeting last night to discuss the matter, and whites becoming scared sent for the Atlanta police. To-day a delegation of reputable citizens reported this to Governor Gordon, and he has offered a reward of $100 for the arrest of any one convicted of complicity in the whipping.

T. W. SHERWOOD, Sergt. Sig. Corps

The Deaf Mute Institute will open on October 2nd.

Mr. John Pitts has returned from a business trip to Denver.

Judge Campbell went to the capital city on Monday on business.

The Rio Grande announces another excursion to Ogden on September 17th. The fare for the round trip will be $20.

Mr. [illegible] Wilder, who has been the guest of Mr. Lee Glockner at the latter's ranch for some days, has returned to the city.

The contract will soon be let for the erection of a new hotel near the D. & R. G. depot. The hotel will be built by Mr. Peter Wiese.

A marriage li[illegible] was issued yesterday from the office of the county clerk to Mr. A[illegible] Koch[illegible] and Frank Bathhurst, both of this city.

The contract was let yesterday for the erection of a h[illegible] new freight depot for the Denver, Texas and Gulf railroad. The building will be erected near the corner of Sawatch and Cucharas streets.

The Hanlon Company have chosen the date for their appearance here from the 16th to Saturday evening, the 21st inst. They will appear in the popular of all the Hanlons plays, "Gordelia's Aspirations."

There will be a public exhibition of the steam vacuum pump on Captain De Courcy's ranch this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The pump is on the old Erickson ranch one half mile northeast of the house. Everybody is invited.

Freeman L. Bossall, for many years publisher of the Daily Post, of Camden, N. J., and who broke down his health by overwork, arrived at The Antlers yesterday evening. If Mr. Bossall, Mr. Bossall may buy this his permanent home.

Addison R. Manning, a cousin of the late Secretary Manning, has arrived in the city from New York and will spend a few weeks here for the benefit of his health. Mr. Manning has been a delegate to two democratic national conventions.

The six Chinamen who were arrested on Sunday night on the charge of gambling appeared in the police court yesterday afternoon for a hearing, but the case was again postponed by reason of their interpreter, Judge Campbell, until to-day at 2 o'clock.

The Western Union company has been obliged, owing to the increase of business, to put up another wire between Pueblo and Denver. The new wire is a joint commercial and railroad wire, being built by the Santa Fe railroad company for the benefit of its business.

A number of new songs, which have not been sung in our city, will be introduced by the singers in the opera, "A Midsummer Night's Dream," which is to be given at the opera house, Thursday evening, Sept. 12th, for the benefit of the Bellevue Institute.

The contract has been signed with the Electric Light company for lighting the city streets for one year at $100 per light. The company was willing to make a contract for three years at a lower rate, but it was considered best not to.

It will be seen in the announcement, to be found elsewhere, J. C. King & Co. will, on Monday, be ready for business in their new quarters on Tejon street, on the south side of the Exchange Bank of Wellen & Shields. The firm hope to see all their old friends and many new ones at the new store.

Rev. Charles Rhoads of Philadelphia, a minister of the Society of Friends, held service at the hotel at Green Mountain Falls on Sunday. There was a good attendance and much interest manifested in the exercises, which were conducted with the usual Quaker simplicity. Mr. Rhoads is an elder, and an impressive speaker. He is a brother of President Rhoads of Bryn Mawr college.

There will be a practice game of cricket to-day under the auspices of the Athletic club at the ball grounds, commencing at 2.30. Any cricketers willing to practice are invited to join the game. In view of the approaching return match with the Denver cricket club, it is specially important that the members of the eleven should be in full force, and try, by constant practice to retrieve the laurels in their second struggle with their rivals in Denver.

Two horses, hitched to a light wagon, which were tied to a post in front of Stark's hardware store yesterday afternoon, became excited and breaking away started quite an excitement on Tejon street. Going up the street to the Gazette corner they ran into an express wagon, throwing the driver of the latter to the ground. They next collided with the wagon of Lennox's wagons, but did no damage to it. Crossing to the other side of the street again, they went with a crash into one of C. E. Durkee's delivery wagons standing in front of the store, demolishing it and a stove which was in it. The harness got so badly tangled up in the wreck that they were unable to get away and were captured. The runaways were the property of Dee Hawkins.

The demand for the Manitou mineral water is steadily growing as it becomes more widely known. One feature of the water is that as now bottled it can be shipped over the country it can be used in any locality with the same beneficial results as when taken directly from the spring. A prominent physician of New York wrote to the company recently that he found that better results were obtained from the use of Manitou soda water in cases of dyspepsia, loss of appetite, etc., than from any water he had ever used. Its value as a remedy in many other affections is widely recognized. The Manitou Mineral Water Company will in the near future be compelled to enlarge their plant in order to satisfy the demand.
